Art Unit: 2154

Art Rejections:

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

3. Claims 1-34 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Chan, U.S. pat. No. 5,764,745.

Per claims 1-3, Chan discloses a network database comprising:

- a) a processor (not shown) for processing a look-up request;
- b) a memory comprising a first registry for storing a first user identity (non-geographic subscriber number) for a selected user, a second registry for storing a second user identity (geographic terminal location number) for the selected user (see col 6, lines 1-29); and

c) an identity mapping mechanism that provides a mapping between the first user identity and the second user identity (see col 7, lines 23-38).

Chan does not show the database in details. An office notice is taken that any conventional database can be used for storing and mapping the first identity to the second identity.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to utilize any conventional database for storing and mapping the first identity to the second identity because such database would have been required to implement Chan's invention.

Per claims 4-5, it is noted that Chan's database functions as a directory database for locating required local number and/or routing data associated with the subscriber. It would have been obvious to one skilled in the art to utilize any known directory database to implement Chan's invention.

Per claim 6, Chan also teaches associating the first and second identities to one or more global identifiers including global database index and service provider identification code (see col 9, lines 20-31).

Claims 7-34 are similar in scope as that of claims 1-6 and hence are rejected for the same rationale set forth for claims 1-6.
